

"The 20s will be the decade of crises - and that is our greatest opportunity!"

When it comes to profound crises and changes, he always keeps his perspective and brings the associated opportunities to the fore: 5 Star speaker Michael Carl is a successful social expert, theologian and journalist. In his trend-setting lectures, he deals with the major crises that lie immediately ahead and shows the scope for shaping the future that will result from them in a completely new way. The 1920s will turn out to be the decade of crises. We already know at least three crises: the development of work, the changes in demography and finally the climate crisis. All three will force us to say goodbye to many familiar things we take for granted. At the same time, they open enormous scope for us to shape the future. We have the chance to make life and work more humane than ever before - if we really make use of this opportunity.

PARTICIPANT FEEDBACK

"Michael Carl gave an absolutely inspiring outlook on the new working worlds and included wonderful personal examples. Our participants were enthusiastic. In particular, his relaxed and communicative or interactive manner of the presentation was very well received and inspired confidence. Thus, he was available for discussions even beyond the topic of his lecture. Really highly recommended."
